Unpacking the YES programme

18 June 2021 1 min read

Learn how companies can successfully achieve B-BBEE levels whilst making a meaningful impact on youth employment.

With unemployment in South Africa at an all-time high, there is increased pressure on Corporate South Africa to contribute in more impactful ways toward the sustainable growth of their businesses and the country as a whole.

Werksmans Attorneys, in collaboration with the Youth Employment Service (YES) will be hosting an informative and interactive webinar discussing the opportunities available for businesses to meaningfully contribute to B-BBEE in a way that will enhance the long-term socio-economic development of the country.

Members of the Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) Practice at Werksmans Attorneys will join the team at YES in discussing some of the below key topics:

- An overview of YES requirements and potential benefits to business
- An assessment of its success and implementation in practice
- Discussing its strengths and weaknesses
- Discussing how easily businesses may in practice comply with and benefit from YES
